About Us

Background: The journey of Kumbil began seven years ago in the quiet fields of Pakkam village, where we didn't just plant seeds, but spent years listening to the wisdom of the earth. Through these seasons of research and trials, we learned the humbling truth that nature cannot be forced—every plant has a soul that belongs to a specific soil and a unique climate. What started as a solitary search for purity has now blossomed into a dedicated community of 200 + farmers, all bound by the calloused hands and shared promise of protecting the integrity of the harvest. By refusing the shortcuts of pesticides and chemical fertilizers, we honor the "Kumbil" tradition of clean, honest food, transforming our seven-year commitment into a global bridge for those ready start eating for their health.

Mission : Kumbil exists to identify and promote crops that naturally grow well in each region's soil and climate. By integrating local knowledge, ecological understanding, and responsible farming practices, we encourage communities to cultivate crops that require little or no chemical inputs. Kumbil also works to ensure the quality of these naturally grown products and supports farmers by helping distribute them to wider markets, creating sustainable livelihoods while providing healthy food to society.

Vision: To restore harmony between people, land, and creation by encouraging communities to cultivate crops that naturally thrive in their local climate—without dependence on chemical fertilizers or pesticides—so that farming becomes healthy, sustainable, and beneficial for both farmers and consumers.

Core Values: Transparency, Heritage Preservation, and Farmer Prosperity.
